Greek religion was polytheistic, meaning that they believed in many gods, not just one. Greek mythology sought to explain the creation of the earth and the nature of the world. The gods were human-like beings who lived on Mount Olympus and could become involved in the lives of men, coming to Earth to change things and influence people. It was also essential to please the gods — happy gods could make things go your way but unhappy gods could make your life miserable. The Ancient Greeks built temples for their gods, not for people to worship in but to house the statues of the gods, which were treated as if they were real.

Theatre
Plays were very important in Ancient Greece as they often formed part of a religious festival. Theatres were open air and circular with seats for the audience set into steps at the sides. The company was made up of three actors who wore different masks to change characters and the chorus, a group of about fifteen people who stood at the side, talking or singing together to narrate the story. Plays could be tragedies

The Octopus

The octopus is an animal that lives in the sea. There are about 300 different species of octopuses in the world that come in many different sizes. They can be as small as 30cm and as big as 4m.

What it looks like

Many people believe that the octopus has eight legs but in fact it has eight arms. It also has two eyes and most octopuses have a sharp beak. Octopuses do not have a skeleton on the inside or outside of their bodies which makes it easier for most of them to squeeze into small spaces to hide from predators. Most octopuses have circular sucker pads, also known as suction cups, on their arms.

Where it lives

Octopuses live in different types of habitat in the ocean. The many species can be found in every ocean in the world. Some live in coral reefs, some in pelagic waters (water that is not close to the ocean floor or near the top) and some live on the ocean floor.

What it eats

Octopuses that live near the bottom of the ocean eat crabs, whelks and clams. Octopuses that live in the open waters eat prawns and fish. Before eating their prey they usually inject it with saliva that paralyses the prey and then they use their sharp beak to pull the prey apart and eat it.

How it protects itself

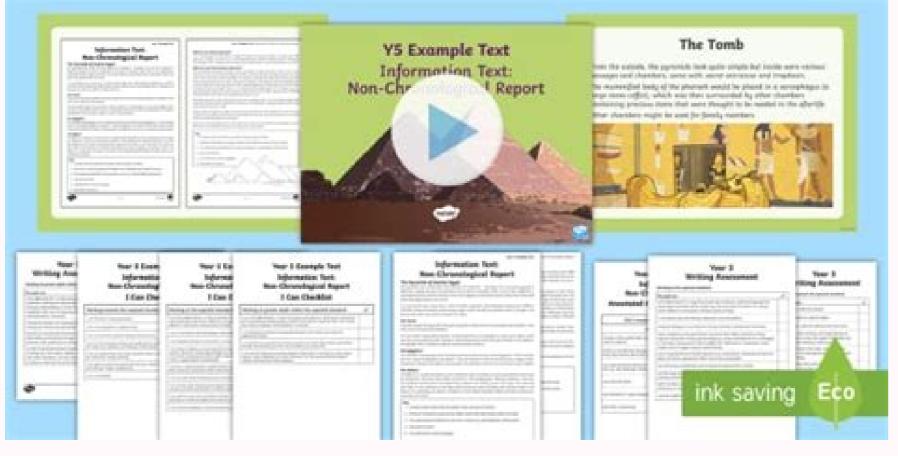

The octopus is good at camouflaging itself when a predator is near. They have special cells in their skin which change colour. They can also hide by squeezing into a tight space. It can also swim away fast with its arms trailing behind. Most octopuses can squirt a thick, black ink into the water to form a large cloud to confuse predators. Some known predators of octopuses are eels, sharks and dolphins.

Octopuses are very intelligent creatures and are known to be good at problem solving. Generally, they have a short life span with some living for six months and others for five years. This is mainly because many octopuses die months after mating.
